

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

WOMEN NEEDLESSLY SUFFERING FROM EASILY TREATABLE, BUT UNDER DIAGNOSED CONDITIONS NEED INFORMATION

New York, New York - July 10, 2007 -- As previously with erectile dysfunction in men, common women's urological conditions are going undiagnosed and untreated due to embarrassment and a lack of understanding on the part of a majority of physicians. Although at least 85% of women of all ages will experience some form of urinary tract problems, most consider these to be an inevitable result of pregnancy and/or age and are reluctant to seek treatment. Those who do are frequently seen by doctors who do not understand the conditions or their treatments. Now, nationally recognized women's urologist Dr. Elizabeth Kavalier has addressed the issues in her comprehensive book, "A Seat On The Aisle, Please!"

"There are women of all ages suffering from urinary tract infections, incontinence, pelvic pain and uterine prolapse who don't understand their conditions and are unaware that there are effective treatments available to relieve their suffering," said Dr. Kavalier. "To compound the situation, the majority of physicians do not understand how to diagnose or effectively treat the problems."

Complete with illustrations, and written for the lay reader, in "A Seat On The Aisle, Please!", Dr. Kavalier explains the female urinary tract, urinary tract conditions and their treatments, how to choose a doctor, even advice on choosing anesthesia and pain medications should surgery be necessary.

This important book will help women suffering from the embarrassment and discomfort caused by urinary tract conditions. It will help bring the situation to light, ease the embarrassment, and inform sufferers of their conditions and the fact that, in most cases, there are effective and non-invasive treatments.
